CBS FEATURES JEWISH COMMUNITY SERVICES HIV/AIDS PREVENTION PROGRAM

Jewish Community Services' (JCS, Baltimore, MD) HIV/AIDS Prevention Education Program is featured in the CBS Television Network's Interfaith Special, "HIV & AIDS: Awareness and Compassion," as part of the network's Culture and Religion Series. The program, broadcast nationally on June 17, will air in Baltimore on June 24 on WJZ TV.

The program looks at the growing movement within faith communities working to prevent the spread, fight the stigma and end discrimination against those living with HIV and AIDS. Robin Sweeney, JCS Health Educator, is interviewed and filmed with Greg Satorie, a speaker for JCS who has lived with AIDS for over 30 years, as they present an HIV/AIDS prevention education program in a public health class at the University of Maryland's School of Public Health. Satorie is a member of Positive Voices, , a Baltimore based ensemble whose members use story and song to share their own experiences with AIDS and to teach prevention.

Jewish Community Services, a Baltimore, Maryland non-profit, offers age- appropriate education and outreach to raise awareness about risky behaviors associated with substance use, abuse and addiction and the spread of HIV/AIDS. JCS has been providing HIV/AIDS education for more than 20 years. Programs are supported by the Steven Kaufman AIDS Outreach Fund. The messages presented in community workshops are reinforced through the award winning ifIknew.org website, www.facebook.com/ifIknew and YouTube channel.

The CBS program, "HIV & AIDS: Awareness and Compassion," will be broadcast on WJZ TV on June 24 at 4:30 a.m. To watch the program online at any time, visit http://www.cbsnews.com/video/watch/?id=7411922n&tag=cbsnewsLeadStoriesAreaMain .
